464 and family and is resold for ten pice, just double the amount he paid 434 for it. Another Kol, acquainted with brick-laying and general re-[439] pairing, earns twelve annas per day when work is available. A few in Barela deal in tendu leaves and sell the same to contractors from [556] Jubbulpore. There was only one Kol in Barela whom the other Kols considered wealthy. "Wealthy" was defined as the possession of ornaments, animals, and some money. The rent for land about Barela [427] varies considerably as it is not all of equal value. Two Kols, however, were paying at the rate of Rs. 4-10-0 per acre.

333 At Deori we found that the Kol colony was mostly employed in
